Can school really be so grim? Some unsmiling faces at South include those of (upper left) Seth Miller and Adam Olivarez (of course, the sun may also be a factor in their expressions) and (upper right) Monic Herrera, wearing blue, who's also looking a little blue.
